

The Berkshire Eagle

News Sports Landscapes Entertainment BWSV Op/Ed Podcasts Obituaries Publications Marketplace Subscriber Services Newsletters

Kevin O'Hara: Hats off to the late David Murphy, Jr.

Posted Wednesday, June 27, 2018 1:00 pm

By Kevin O'Hara

PITTSFIELD — During the funeral mass for David Murphy held earlier this month at St. Mark Church, my mind drifted like incense throughout the solemn service, as I fondly recalled my dear old friend, who had died suddenly at age 64/

I first met David in Ireland in 1977, when he knocked on our cottage door, which my wife Belita and I had rented for the year. Dave, a recent graduate of Boston College, was accompanied by his parents, Callie and David Sr. They had been following our Irish adventures in the Berkshire Sampler, and surprised us while on vacation there, treating us to a wonderful meal at the Longford Arms Hotel.

As the years passed, I became close friends with Dave's younger brother, John, who took over the family business — Stevenson & Company — where I took out our home and auto insurance. While visiting John, I'd often run into Dave, now a well-respected Pittsfield attorney. Soon I was playing golf with this entertaining pair, enjoying their fierce but friendly sibling rivalry.

A found cap

One winter's evening, just in front of the Berkshire Common across from Park Square, I found a muddied cap by the curbside where my car was parked. Thinking it might come in handy once washed, I picked up the frozen hat and tossed it into my trunk. At home, I let it soak for a day, then gave it one good scrubbing. Sure enough, a handsome woolen ski cap flecked with color shortly emerged. Once it was dry, I pulled it over my ears and looked into a mirror. Simply dashing!

The following winter, donning my sporty cap for its second season, I turned the cap inside out to find its country's origin, but only found a small white tag sewn into its felt lining with washing instructions. On the back side, however, was a seven-digit local phone number handwritten in pen. "Drats," I muttered, "who puts their home phone number inside a hat." But, then again, I reminded myself, who picks up ragged hats from city gutters? With some reluctance, I dialed the Subscribe for as little as 99 cents for unlimited web & eEdition access.

When I explained the reason for my call, Dave was ecstatic, as though I had just found his long-lost dog. He peppered me with questions: "Where did you find it? What shape is it in? When can I get it back?"

I played the monkey: "Hey, not so fast. Finders Keepers."

"What if I buy you a pint at Patrick's Pub?"

"Nope."

"Two pints!"

"Done!" I gladly agreed.

When Dave and I met at Patrick's for his glorious cap-to-head reunion, he told me the ski cap had been a Christmas gift from his mom, now deceased, and how he had lamented its loss ever since. While we enjoyed our pints, he never let the cap leave his grasp, and would often twirl it on his fingers like a happy schoolchild.

Every pew filled

As the soothing church choir broke into "Song of Farewell," I snapped from my bygone reverie and glanced at the forlorn faces that filled every pew of the spacious church — a bounty of folks ranging from esteemed judges to devout nuns. In the front pews sat the bereaved but proud Murphy clan; the middle pews were occupied by former teammates that Dave had captained on their winning PHS hockey team, along with mountaineering buddies who had accompanied Dave in ascending all 46 major peaks of the Adirondacks. Lastly, a scattering of elders who admired this "smiling and indefatigable young man," through his unflinching Meals on Wheels deliveries every Sunday.

Like myself, it seemed that all in attendance were trying to call up their own fond memories of this endearing gent who had touched so many in so many ways. Yes, a congregation of crestfallen companions searching for some semblance of peace, while mourning the loss of a dear and cherished friend.

Kevin O'Hara is a long-time Eagle contributor.

PRINT Tweet G+ Share 100 Share

TALK TO US

If you'd like to leave a comment (or a tip or a question) about this story with the editors, please email us. We also welcome letters to the editor for publication; you can do that by filling out our letters form and submitting it to the newsroom.

OTHER ITEMS THAT MAY INTEREST YOU

Clarence Fanto:
Renewing a license? You're in good standing (around) with others

Chan Lowe:
Berkshire rituals on parade

Leonard Quart |
Letter From New York: The rise of a media-politician demagogue

Baby Boomer Memories:
Remembering parades of the past, and those who put them on

LOCAL NEWS

Officers retire, others get promotions at Pittsfield Police Department

Monterey hopes move by AT&T improves cell service

More than a shred of evidence Cheshire Cheese Festival whets appetites

County's lone drug-recognition officer believes in program

High stakes: As recreational pot sales near, race on to develop public safety tools

Read more

Puzzles Palace

Dimensions Pyramid
Premier Crossword Sudoku Multi

NASCAR

NASCAR Standings
As of: Jul. 08

RANK	DRIVER	PV RANK
1	Kyle Busch	1
2	Kevin Harvick	2
3	Martin Truex Jr	4
4	Joey Logano	3
5	Brad Keselowski	5

MORE HOME

NASCAR

- Erik Jones gets 1st Cup win in crash-filled race at Daytona
  - Stenhouse turns Daytona into demolition derby
  - The Latest: Jones earns 1st career Cup win at Daytona
  - Larson gets Xfinity win after Haley's pass ruled illegal
  - Elliott gives Hendrick, Chevy needed boost with Daytona pole
- MORE HOME

SPORTS

Howard Herman | Designated Hitter: The Berkshires were a Fourth of July baseball hot bed

Roundup: Pittsfield Post 68 executes walk-off suicide squeeze in 7th to beat Aldenville

Lauren R. Stevens | Hikes & Walks: Walk through history at Hopkins Memorial Forest

Gene Chague | Berkshire Woods & Waters: Fly fishing the Penobscot River in Maine

Richard Lord | Tee to Green: Gilardi, Linn head to Boston for Mass. Amateur

Read more

TRENDING

Up to 6 years given in ambush, robbery, stabbing of pizza delivery driver

Child hurt in Pittsfield rollover accident at Woodlawn, Tyler intersection

Out on bail in rape attempt, man allegedly attacks woman on Stockbridge trail

A sensitive subject: Sightings of toxic hogweed prompt concern, warnings

With potentially bad heroin in area, opioid users urged to be safe, have access to OD-reversal drug