

The Berkshire Eagle

News Sports Landscapes Entertainment BWSV Op/Ed Podcasts Obituaries Publications Marketplace Subscriber Services Newsletters

Kevin O'Hara: Hats off to the late David Murphy, Jr.

Posted Wednesday, June 27, 2018 1:00 pm

By Kevin O'Hara

PITTSFIELD — During the funeral mass for David Murphy held earlier this month at St. Mark Church, my mind drifted like incense throughout the solemn service, as I fondly recalled my dear old friend, who had died suddenly at age 64/

I first met David in Ireland in 1977, when he knocked on our cottage door, which my wife Belita and I had rented for the year. Dave, a recent graduate of Boston College, was accompanied by his parents, Callie and David Sr. They had been following our Irish adventures in the Berkshire Sampler, and surprised us while on vacation there, treating us to a wonderful meal at the Longford Arms Hotel.

As the years passed, I became close friends with Dave's younger brother, John, who took over the family business — Stevenson & Company — where I took out our home and auto insurance. While visiting John, I'd often run into Dave, now a well-respected Pittsfield attorney. Soon I was playing golf with this entertaining pair, enjoying their fierce but friendly sibling rivalry.

A found cap

One winter's evening, just in front of the Berkshire Common across from Park Square, I found a muddied cap by the curbside where my car was parked. Thinking it might come in handy once washed, I picked up the frozen hat and tossed it into my trunk. At home, I let it soak for a day, then gave it one good scrubbing. Sure enough, a handsome woolen ski cap flecked with color shortly emerged. Once it was dry, I pulled it over my ears and looked into a mirror. Simply dashing!

The following winter, donning my sporty cap for its second season, I turned the cap inside out to find its country's origin, but only found a small white tag sewn into its felt lining with washing instructions. On the back side, however, was a seven-digit local phone number handwritten in pen. "Drats," I muttered, "who puts their home phone number inside a hat." But, then again, I reminded myself, who picks up ragged hats from city gutters? With some reluctance, I dialed the nameless number, and who answers the phone but Dave Murphy!

When I explained the reason for my call, Dave was ecstatic, as though I had just found his long-lost dog. He peppered me with questions: "Where did you find it? What shape is it in? When can I get it back?"

I played the monkey: "Hey, not so fast. Finders Keepers."

"What if I buy you a pint at Patrick's Pub?"

"Nope."

"Two pints!"

"Done!" I gladly agreed.

When Dave and I met at Patrick's for his glorious cap-to-head reunion, he told me the ski cap had been a Christmas gift from his mom, now deceased, and how he had lamented its loss ever since. While we enjoyed our pints, he never let the cap leave his grasp, and would often twirl it on his fingers like a happy schoolchild.

Every pew filled

As the soothing church choir broke into "Song of Farewell," I snapped from my bygone reverie and glanced at the forlorn faces that filled every pew of the spacious church — a bounty of folks ranging from esteemed judges to devout nuns. In the front pews sat the bereaved but proud Murphy clan; the middle pews were occupied by former teammates that Dave had captained on their winning PHS hockey team, along with mountaineering buddies who had accompanied Dave in ascending all 46 major peaks of the Adirondacks. Lastly, a scattering of elders who admired this "smiling and indefatigable young man," through his unflinching Meals on Wheels deliveries every Sunday.

Like myself, it seemed that all in attendance were trying to call up their own fond memories of this endearing gent who had touched so many in so many ways. Yes, a congregation of crestfallen companions searching for some semblance of peace, while mourning the loss of a dear and cherished friend.

Kevin O'Hara is a long-time Eagle contributor.

PRINT Tweet G+ Share 103 in Share

TALK TO US

If you'd like to leave a comment (or a tip or a question) about this story with the editors, please email us. We also welcome letters to the editor for publication; you can do that by filling out our letters form and submitting it to the newsroom.

OTHER ITEMS THAT MAY INTEREST YOU

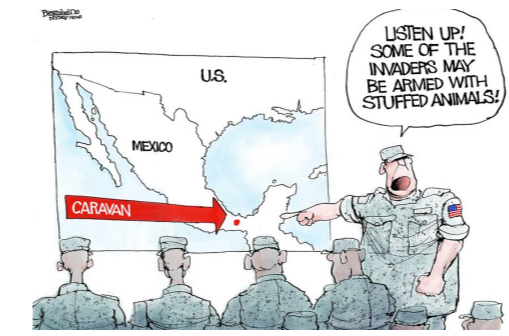

Clarence Fanto: Time to get serious about universal health care coverage

Chan Lowe: Justice served - with a side of politics

Alan Chartock | I, Publius: We have to return sanity to our government

John Dickson: Poster child for broken system

LOCAL NEWS

In Adams, paradegoers dress to impress

Moving mountains: A look at Catamount Ski Resort's multimillion-dollar renovation

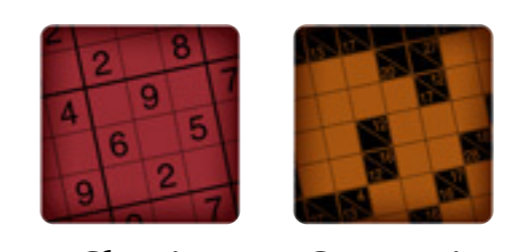

Ballot Question 3: Both sides cite public safety concerns - but that's where agreement ends

Community leaders push for West Side Pittsfield Police substation

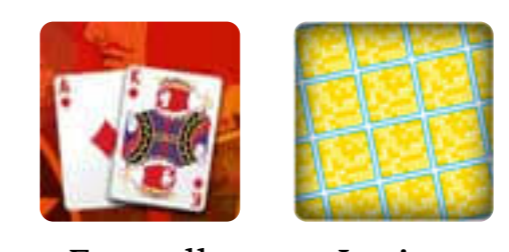

West Stockbridge Fire Dept. holding benefit for injured firefighter

Read more ▶

Puzzles Palace

Classic Sudoku Conceptis Kakuro

Freecell Solitaire Junior ReMind

Junior Sudoku Sheffer Crossword

NASCAR

NASCAR Standings

As of: Oct. 29

RANK	DRIVER	PV RANK
1	Kyle Busch	1
2	Kevin Harvick	2
3	Martin Truex Jr	3
4	Joey Logano	7
5	Kurt Busch	6

MORE HOME

NASCAR

- Logano shoves past Truex to earn shot at NASCAR championship
 - The Latest: Logano shoves Truex away to move on to Miami
 - NASCAR's Jimmie Johnson lands new sponsor in Ally Financial
 - Kyle Busch to lead next round of NASCAR's playoffs
 - Johnny Sauter wins Martinsville for series-best 4th time
- MORE HOME

SPORTS

Berkshire County sports notes: Adams-Cheshire PAL basketball hosting signups

Athlete Spotlight: Mount Greylock volleyball's Marley Buffis and Maddie Albert

College roundup: Williams women's soccer team advances in NESCAC tournament

Western Mass. football playoffs: Lee, Wahconah earn top seeds as Taconic, Hoosac Valley also make field

Berkshire County golfers head east for MIAA state championships

Read more ▶

TRENDING

$21M Berkshire Line upgrade to bolster ailing rail route

As Pittsfield officer leaves force, documents detail trail of discipline

One Pittsfield family's too-close encounter with rail traffic

West Stockbridge Fire Dept. holding benefit for injured firefighter

Pittsfield man faces firearms charges for ammo, weapons