MEDICAL & SAFETY

Adventure Travel in remote regions involves risk. It is important that you fully understand that you will be outside the range of timely access to medical treatment and evacuation, even in cases of trauma, during a portion of your trip. There is a medical center in McGrath that can provide triage and some basic medications. If this is a concern to you, please call for additional information.

All participants should be in a good physical health. We will be in remote regions for extended periods of time and transportation to medical facilities may be impossible. A recent medical examination and discussion with your doctor about the specific trip you are planning to join is recommended.

Mental preparation is also essential to your safety and full enjoyment of the trip. Wilderness travel can be fun, exhilarating, relaxing and awe-inspiring. But you may also be cold, wet, tired, sore, nervous, bug bitten and uncomfortable. A positive attitude and flexibility are important tools for coping with the tribulations that are inherent of wilderness travel. Please be certain that you are comfortable with the risks involved in wilderness travel before making this reservation.

GRUB

The food we serve is wholesome and carefully prepared at Hotel McGrath's restaurant. These meals will be re-heated and served and other meals will be prepared and cooked in the field or at camp. We have a wide variety of meals to please a wide range of tastes. Due to our remote location, the ability to carry and store quantities of fresh food is limited, but our plentiful meals get excellent reviews. Alcohol is not provided but you are welcome to bring your own (subject to weight restrictions). Dietary restrictions are typically easy to accommodate. Please make sure to tell us what foods you can't eat. Snack food is plentiful and we provide 3 solid meals each day that we are in the field. Snacks include dry meat, nuts, fruit, energy bars and candy. If you want to bring some of your own snacks, feel free to pack up to 2 pounds of whatever pleases you the most.
