A colorful and exciting story of strength, courage and perseverance!

By: Eric Asbery

From the very first words, I was wrapped up in the cleverly descriptive fashion that this story is told. With each passing chapter, alternate perspectives created an environment that enabled me to feel as though I was part of the story. The story itself smacks of familiar tones of good versus evil but with twists and turns that rely on the characters interactions with each other on many different levels.

Love, pain, hope, fear, life and death are intertwined in a thrilling dance of what inevitably becomes true focus and closure to the idea that if you have faith, no matter how much self-doubt may eat away at you, you will be victorious. Combined with colorful and thickly described surroundings and happenings, the characters of Amber and Cree succeed in weaving a story that defines their unwavering connection to each other and sweeps you into their world enveloping you as a participant of their fight to be free their world of evil.

Sonia Poynter's The Last Stored was a book I couldn't put down, this is fantastic storytelling. Swaro!

About the Book

After the sudden death of her parents, making it through the day is a struggle for Amber Megan Peel. In the midst of her grief, an exquisite bird perches on her garden fence and shows her visions of a vivid landscape and a dark lord slouching upon a throne. She thinks the visions are tied to her sorrow. But when a boy flies through her kitchen window to tell her she's the Last Stored, she wonders if she's just lost her mind.

Cree of Din is tasked with one job: Bring Amber home. For seven years, Cree has trained as her protector and it is the ultimate responsibility. Failure means Amber's certain death, and that's not an option for Cree – especially since he's falling in love with her.

The Returning has begun. Now all Amber and Cree have to do is enter Tali, a world of unimaginable splendor and equally unimaginable horror, and defeat Lorthis. If they can't, not only will Tali plunge into darkness, but so will Earth.

EXCERPT

Cree climbs onto the railing and extends his hand to me. “Your choice, Amber, you can come or you can stay!” he yells over the roar of the water.

“This is nuts. You expect me to jump?”

“Nuts? No, merely the door.” He beams with anticipation. He seems fine. In fact, his eyes sparkle with the moon’s glow.

My heart skips. My choice. I had another choice. I grasp his hand and crawl onto the railing. My feet slip, and I waver. Cree steadies me with his hand. The water falls in torrents in front of me. Am I really about to do this?

“You can’t go back once you enter. Are you ready? You can do this.”

He looks into the raging waters, then back at me. His cloak swirls around him like Superman’s cape.

“Yes, I can do this!” My heartbeat bangs in my throat. I’m about to jump off of Lovers Leap with a boy I don’t know, along with two little old men who have vanished below my feet. This is crazy, but I’m supposed to do it. Part of me knew it every time my mother and father looked over this very railing. I’m at the door.

Cree squeezes my hand, nods, and we jump. He howls. The feeling of dropping over a roller coaster comes on fast. The water rushes by, cold and wet. I fall.

My chest tightens like I’ve had the wind knocked out of me. I choke and cough, spitting out water. I see darkness, and I feel Cree’s hand holding mine.

Then, a bright light shimmers and glows at my feet, reflecting upward. The sound of the water fades. My lungs fill with sweet air. The light expands, covering me. Wind swirls and holds me up. I no longer fall, but glide upward. A light from above warms my face, and the aroma of fragrant honey hangs on the air. We twist and turn, Cree’s cloak coils around him, my own clothing flapping in the wind.

I giggle loudly and squeal like a child.

Cree crinkles his face and laughs along. The wind continues pushing us through a tunnel. I lift my free hand and try to feel the mist forming around us; it scatters with my touch, only to form again when I retreat. We have increased our speed. Far above me, Dartlin and Fink’s feet come into focus, and they’re whooping with joy.

Then we stop.

We stand in a brick wading pool a few inches deep. Stone replaces the air, which moments before surrounded me. I take in a deep, fragrant breath.

Cree continues to hold my hand. He looks at our fingers still entwined and laughs. “You can let go.”

Faith-Based Publisher Launches a Young Adult Fantasy Anaiah Surge

Anaiah Press, a digital-first publisher of faith-based books based out of St. Petersburg, Florida, released The Last Stored by debut author Sonia Poynter on January 6, 2015. Poynter can't separate herself from her Christian faith and craved a book that was both, exciting, enchanting, romantic, and clean. She created that world, populated that world, and then drove it into a rewarding experience. Poynter jeered, cheered, and cried right along with her characters. The Last Stored offers readers a thrill ride of emotions, from grief, to a first love, to joy while traveling from Earth to the dying world of Tali.

"Amber was stored on Earth to save another. Cree was sent to bring her home. Together they must find out if their love is stronger than one man's hate," said Sonia Poynter. "Hidden on Earth for her power to lock the book. Amber must return home and destroy the evil before it bleeds to Earth."

Sonia Poynter grew up traipsing through the thick woods of Kentucky. The magic of the forest made her want to write. She has an eclectic educational background from ITT Technical Institute, IVY Tech, and IUPUI. Currently, she lives in the sleepy community of Pittsboro, Indiana, with the love of her life and God has blessed them both with three amazing kids.

Anaiah Press is a St. Petersburg-based, digital-first publishing house dedicated to presenting quality, faith-based fiction and nonfiction books to the public.
