

Jiuchang Wei

Professor of School of Management at University of Science and Technology of China

Dr. Jiuchang Wei is Professor of School of Management at University of Science and Technology of China. Wei is also a visiting scholar at Hazard Reduction and Recovery Center, Texas A&M University, and Curtin University Sustainability Policy Institute, Curtin University of Technology. He received his PhD in Management Science and Engineer from University of Science and Technology of China. Wei primary research interests are disaster management, risk perception, sustainable development in China, and information management. In 2009, Wei was honoured by Program for New Century Excellent Talents in University. He has published over 40 full review journal articles in Chinese or English since 2006, and conducted research or provided technical services to 6 different organizations in the public and private sectors in China. In addition, he also served as reviewers of NSFC proposals and over 10 academic journals.

Awards and Honours

Program for New Century Excellent Talents in University, 2009.