Introduction

In July 2011 I was lucky enough to acquire part of Henry Otley Beyer's Catalogue of specimens (tektites, stone tools, pottery, jewellery) together with a few ethnographic photos and some archaeological photos. Basically this photo collection was found in an attic in Quezon City some 9 months or so ago. It was purchased by the sellers grandfather 'around 10 years ago'. This makes sense as I believe much of Beyer's remaining material was sold around 2002-2005. By the time I got on the scene around 90% of the ethnographic images, including images previously owned/taken by Dean Conant Worcester (1866-1924) had been sold (70% to one European buyer). None of the catalogue photos had been sold and so I was able to purchase this entire collection plus a few remaining ethnographic and other photos. It was an exciting find as I thought all this material had been sold to the National Library of Australia. I wanted to keep this catalogue collection intact so I bought the lot, despite the hefty price tag. I reckon these are just remnants of the H.O.B. Photo Catalogue as the collection is clearly very incomplete (despite me purchasing all available catalogue photos and none being previously sold). Probably just left over bits and bobs after the sale to Australia I am guessing. I think further research would reveal that many of these plates are published.

Henry Otley Beyer, 1883-1966. This is a young Beyer – maybe taken in the 1910's?
