What offseason?

In Atlanta's Mercedes-Benz Stadium, the Alabama Crimson Tide captured the College Football Playoff National Championship on Monday, putting a bow on the 2017 season.

However, the competition was just getting started in Dallas, Texas.

From January 6–10, the nation's most talented seniors gathered at Addison's Greenhill School for the 2018 College Gridiron Showcase & Symposium.

While scouts and executives lined the field, a select group of athletes competed in OTA-style practices, honing their craft with notable coaches from across the country.

Individual drills and controlled scrimmages held throughout the all-star event allowed collegiate studs to solidify their stock and climb teams' big boards.

However, the showcase also provided overlooked prospects a valuable opportunity to make a name for themselves ahead of draft season.

With time ticking between now and the NFL Scouting Combine (March 2–5), outgoing seniors like UTSA's Dalton Sturm and Devron Davis aren't wasting a single rep.

After 5 days and 4 nights of expert training, life coaching, and mentoring, showcase attendees left Dallas on Wednesday.

While they return to college campuses, these seniors set their sights on a return to the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex for the NFL Draft, held in AT&T Stadium on April 26.
