In the 106 pound division, freshman Braxton Brown edged out top-ranked Dominic Chavez from Arlington Martin in the final with a 1-0 decision win to take home the gold.

In the 113 pound division, another freshman took home the gold as Noah Gochberg from Austin Vandegrift took down Allen's Gabe Martinez with a 7-6 decision win.

In the 126 pound division, Logan Brown from Allen upset the two-time defending state champion Isaiah Delgado from El Paso Eastwood behind a last-second takedown that gave Brown the 9-6 win.

El Paso Franklin's James McClain-Green capped off an undefeated season with the 132 pound gold after taking down Schertz Clemens' Deshawn Cosby with a 10-0 win to secure back-to-back state titles.

In the 160 pound division, Allen's Juwan Robinson, the defending 152-pound champion, defeated Amarillo Tascosa's Samuel Mora with a pin in the second period of the state final.

In the 170 pound division, Braeden Redlin of Allen finished off his high school career with four state championships, an achievement only two other male wrestlers have done, after defeating Adam Kilgore of Arlington Bowie 4-0 in the final.

In the 102 pound division, Weatherford's Camille Fournier used a huge third period to record a pin as time was expiring after trailing 5-1 early to Arlington Martin's Samara Chavez.

In the 110 pound division, Euless Trinity's Mack Beggs finished off his high school career 92-0 and with two state championships after defeating Chelsea Sanchez of Katy Morton Ranch 15-3 in the final. Beggs, a transgender, has made national news by being forced to compete in the girls division due to UIL rules stating that athletes must compete in the gender on their birth certificate.

In Texas, state law requires student athletes to compete as the gender on their birth certificates. A transgender boy named Mack Beggs just became the girls wrestling champion for the second year in a row. <https://t.co/yhQFC6bix9> <pic.twitter.com/AUcMuW0nwF>
