

facilitated LEARNING

Design and Facilitation for Work Group Performance and Development

LEO DANNY F. MALLONGA

Danny Mallonga has extensive experience in international and cross-cultural communication, organizational development and conflict resolution. He has been active as an educator, mediator and organizational development consultant for over fifteen years for businesses, non-profit organizations and educational institutions across North America, Asia, Africa and Europe. Applying his lived cross-cultural experience and broad knowledge of adult learning theory to the individual, interpersonal dynamics, the group, and the organization, he develops programs and interventions for organizations to assess their needs and develop strategies in handling conflict constructively while encouraging and expanding organizational capacity for learning, innovation, and performance.

Dr. Mallonga is known for his accomplishments at Columbia University's International Center for Cooperation and Conflict Resolution (ICCCR) where he was the Program Director for a decade, as well as an adjunct instructor in the Organizational Psychology Program of graduate students from across the university. He co-authored the negotiation and mediation manuals currently used by the university.

Danny is based in Manila, Philippines and applies his intercultural perspective and expertise in projects for government entities, non-governmental organizations, international organizations of the United Nations System, educational and social justice organizations, where he works with teams, boards, educators, and leaders. As a conflict resolution practitioner, he is among the few experts who are willing to go into the field to train staff members of organizations working to alleviate humanitarian crises in conflict zones.

Dr. Mallonga earned a Bachelor of Science in Public Health from the University of the Philippines, and a Master of Arts from the Ateneo de Manila University. He holds both the Master (Ed.M.) and the Doctorate (Ed.D.) of Education in Education Leadership from Columbia University in the United States.