

For Glenn Frey

In the early '70s he was the new kid in town who told us to take it easy and gave us the best of his love.

He dueled with the Daltons On Seven Bridges Road,
And saw many a tequila sunrise After another one of those nights.

Glen belonged to the city and loved life in the fast lane with pretty maids all in a row.

He took it to the limit when the heat was on,
And sang the smuggler's blues while wearing those shoes.

A victim of love
he finally found somebody, And life was no longer about wasted time.

Surviving years of witchy women and lyin' eyes, he reassured us all that love will keep us alive.

Though he's already gone and we have a heartache tonight, we can always find that peaceful easy feeling.

Glenn has left the Hotel California For his journey to the sorcerer, but as the song says, he can check out anytime he wants,
but he can never leave.