RIGGINS INTERNATIONAL RIGHTS SERVICE IS NOW MOSAIC RIGHTS MANAGEMENT

This year, Riggins International Rights Service celebrates their 15th anniversary serving as the rights department for several inspirational publishers. They have issued over 5,000 licensing agreements and helped clients reach millions of people around the world with books and Bibles in their own language or preferred reading format.

In celebration and commemoration of their phenomenal growth, reach and diversity, they have changed their name to reflect the current scope of the company. They will now be known as Mosaic Rights Management.

This name was chosen for the following reasons:

- They promote and license titles in almost every category published.
- They represent a mosaic of Christian publishers with diverse theological thought.
- They currently license to a varied group of publishers in 55 languages, reaching a human mosaic of cultures and colors.
- When placing all the pieces together, the finished result is a global mosaic that serves the inspirational publishing community.

Clients and partners of Mosaic Rights Management had this to say about the company:

"Mosaic has extended B&H's global reach to over 2 million more lives. Cindy and her team are invaluable to our global reach, we could not be in as many countries and languages as we are without her expert help and hard work. We are strong, ministry driven partners." — Jennifer Lyell, Vice President of Book Publishing, B&H Publishing Group.

"During the years Abingdon Press has been represented by Mosaic Rights Management, our books have been translated into 36 languages and have touched nearly one million lives across the globe. Mosaic Rights has helped us in our efforts to reach more people in more places; and we value the experience, the relationships, and the high degree of professionalism of the Mosaic Rights staff." — Mary Catherine Dean, Associate Publisher/Editor-in-Chief, Abingdon Press
