Dear Noel,

ABOUT THE BOOK: While living with her mother, father and two brothers Noel decides it is time to face the world as many millennials now do drawing closer to their thirties. All she has to do is get a job, find a husband, have babies and settle down, then life will be complete. Piece of cake, right? One can only hope for this millennial. LATE BLOOMER (Lisa K. Stephenson | February 21, 2019 | $16.99 | Paperback) is an all-around relatable adult romance novel.

Twenty-eight-year-old Noel Lee Kwon is a millennial struggling to find her place in the world. Now off on her own, she is experiencing love, heartbreak, and responsibility.

Arriving in New York City she begins her journey as a free millennial where she meets Nathan Ramirez—the married, painstakingly handsome, wealthy law firm accountant seeking to make his mistress jealous by sweeping Noel off of her feet. Dinners, clothes, gifts, a life she had only seen on television, Noel was now living the dream. That is, until she learns that an old high school flame is a resident of the big apple; Kenneth Anderson.

Months later Noel learns the rules for these situations. But choosing Kenneth means putting her dating pool days behind her, maturing and leading a monogamous lifestyle with the man she now truly loves. And Noel isn't quite willing to give it all up yet, the affluent lifestyle, the excitement, and thrills of dating she craves. If she can manage to make the right decision and walk away from Nathan for good, she will have a chance at true love with Kenneth.
