WOMEN'S AUTHOR BRINGS HER MESSAGE TO THE PODIUM HOW TO AVOID BEING DERAILED BY A SIGNIFICANT OTHER

MANHATTAN, NY (March 20, 2018)—Author Lisa K. Stephenson has a unique style in her fictional books of sharing life's lessons through her characters. Where she could've easily chosen a series of How To books, instead her rich characters bring many of life's challenges to the forefront. The character experience love, hate, anger, jealousy, outrage, sibling rivalry, passion, to the point of crossing the threshold of committing a crime. However, the one seamless theme that seems to always be on the storytelling palette is how one's life can be derailed by a significant other. You quickly learn that no matter how educated or experienced a woman is that bad decisions in choosing a lover can destroy one's spirit and career.

“By bringing this to workshops and speaking engagements, it is to ignite women in a sisterhood circle to discuss the mistakes we make with romance and intimacy. I've seen the most educated and successful women fall into this toxic and hypnotic place. By opening the conversation to this sensitive topic, where one's vulnerability is exposed in a trusting environment, that we can heal, redirect the energy and support one another so it doesn't happen again”, says Lisa Stephenson.

A series to topics will be introduced to working women in Manhattan through major companies where Human Resource Directors are searching for ongoing diversity and education workshops that will guide their female executives and workers towards a program that will strengthen their lives.
