Intergenerational Appreciative Inquiry in Conversation and in Action

Edited by
Marge Schiller
Matthew Moehle
Peter Whitehouse

Sponsored by
Appreciating People

Cover image credit: flickr.com/photos/blmurch
Intergenerational Appreciative Inquiry in Conversation and in Action

Inside this issue

Welcome to May 2015 issue of AI Practitioner

Intergenerational Appreciative Inquiry in Conversation and in Action celebrates the diversity and generativity of intergenerational conversations. Business, education and communities show what they can achieve by reaching out and connecting with different age groups. They share their successful methods to 'go between in order to create the beyond'.

In her Feature Choice, Jacqueline Wong develops a model for engaged governance in reviewing the momentous citizen engagement process in Singapore that involved 660 dialogues, 47,000 who met in face-to-face meetings and 4,000 more who engaged online.

In Research Review & Notes, Gail Simon at the University of Bedfordshire in the UK highlights cases on collaborative or reflexive inquiry from social services.

AI Resources includes a variety of resources related to intergenerational efforts that celebrate diversity.

We would like to thank Appreciating People for sponsoring this issue.

Anne Radford
Editor, AI Practitioner

Intergenerational Appreciative Inquiry In Conversation and In Action

Editors: Marge Schiller, Matthew Moehle and Peter Whitehouse

Feature Choice

Towards a Model for Engaged Governance: Citizen Conversations for a Participatory Democracy

Jacqueline Wong

Intergenerational Al Methods

Film Portraits

Their Potential for Appreciative Intergenerational Conversations

Joep C. de Jong

'I Have a Dream'

A Call for Intergenerational Dreaming

Margaret Wright

Appreciating All Generations

Intergenerational Dialogue

Robyn Stratton-Berkessel
Intergenerational AI and Business

32 Children of their Time
Descriptions, Credos and Views of the Different Generations
Agnes Joester

36 Intergenerational Appreciative Inquiry Helps Managers Move Beyond Generational Misconceptions in the Workplace
Donna Butts

40 Mentorship is Ageless
It is About Gratitude, Reciprocity and Appreciation
Maureen McKenna and Diane Pascoe

Intergenerational AI and Communities

43 Appreciative Intergenerational Community Building
A Strengths-Based Approach in Uganda
Kristin Bodiford and Arthur Namara Araali

46 Stories and Examples of Results Using Appreciative Inquiry
Generations Coming Together to Make a Change in Their Community
Kristin Bodiford

47 Generations United
Because We are Stronger Together
Donna Butts

50 Girls About Political Participation (GAPP)
Marge Schiller and Charlotte Marshall

Intergenerational AI and Education

55 Beyond Intergenerational to Intergenerative
Going Between to Imagine Beyond
Peter Whitehouse

58 Appreciating Young People
Conversations that Matter
Sue James

61 Young People in a School Setting Making a Positive Difference to Senior Citizens in their Community
Craig Knight and Glyn Willoughby

64 The First Appreciative Education Conference
A Story of Intergenerational Ingenuity
Jennifer Bloom, Stephanie Ann Suarez, Hope Wooten, Jodie Waldroup, Kaitlynn Kirk, Stephanie Baskerville and Erin Smith
Intergenerational AI and Thriving Families

67 Lessons from Ancestors
My Historical Intergenerational Appreciative Inquiry
Thomas E. Myers

74 Appreciative Intergenerational Conversations
A Place to Flourish
Alexandra Stavros

77 Intergenerational Conversations Toward End of Life
Structure for Storytelling, Inquiry and Dialogue
Tony Silbert and Mary Vargas

80 Appreciative Inquiry Research Review & Notes
Appreciative Inquiry as Organisational Research Culture
Gail Simon

85 Appreciative Inquiry Resources
A variety of resources that focus on generational diversity as a resource to be celebrated
Matthew R. Moehle, Roopa Nandi and Hardik Shah

89 About the August 2015 Issue
Stories and Examples of Results Using Appreciative Inquiry
Editor: Ralph Weikel

90 About the sponsor of this issue
Appreciating People

92 Advertisements
The Taos Institute

93 The Centre for Appreciative Inquiry
Feature Choice Articles
AI Practitioner 2015

94 2015 World Appreciative Inquiry Conference

95 IAPG Contacts and AI Practitioner Subscription Information
I have grown up around Appreciative Inquiry (AI). The first time I actually remember hearing about AI is when my mom visited my kindergarten class almost twelve years ago. She helped the teachers organize a conversation with all the kindergarteners (aged four to five) and the older kids in the school to help us get excited about starting elementary school. We were asked questions about what we loved about being in kindergarten, what we wanted to be when we grow up, and what we thought elementary school would be like. We were fortunate enough to have someone saying that anything was possible – telling us to dream big.

The next time I went to an AI-related event was with my mom and Ms. Marge (that is Dr. Marge Schiller). I was in third grade. We went to a graphic recording event taught by Ms. Diana Arsenian. I remember being surprised that I got to leave school and go on a trip to learn to color. I found out it was more than just coloring pictures. Before long, my mom, Ms. Marge, several other people and I were illustrating and writing at the same time to collaboratively bring AI conversations to life. Ms. Aresenian provided an illustration for this article.

Over the next couple of years, I attended some Positive Change Core (PCC) meetings (www.positivechangecore.org). I liked how all these adults included young people like me and cared about our thoughts and feelings. I remember Ms. Marge saying, “We have two possibilities, we can look at what works, or we can look at what doesn’t work. Whatever we look for is what we are going to find.” Even back then I remember thinking, “I am going to be a person who looks for what works, and I am going to find it!”

In this story, Ally Stavros shares pieces of her appreciative learning journey and how appreciative intergenerational conversations have helped her flourish. She includes personal stories about how these have been especially influential during some of the not-so-positive moments that many teenagers experience. Her discussion includes a focus on the application to SOAR (Strengths, Opportunities, Aspirations, Results) approach to her personal life and its impact on her development.
Five years ago, I joined my mom for a three-week adventure to Australia, where she led several workshops with Mr. John Loty (http://www.johnloty.com/). On the 22-hour trip, my mom had me read Thin Book of Appreciative Inquiry and the Thin Book of SOAR (Strengths, Opportunities, Aspirations and Results) to understand why we were going there. My mom shared with me what she loves and what she teaches. I really took away a lot from those two small books and our conversation.

All of these trips and adventures were great, but I never realized how much the people in my early years would make a profound impact on me as I entered my teenage years, until having this opportunity to reflect and write this story. It is little moments that make an impact on someone’s life, and I remember how it helped me learn about who I want to be.

Let me share a story about how I had to learn to SOAR at a difficult moment in my life, one that I know many teens go through at some point.

When transitioning from middle school to high school, I began to think that I was not really good at anything. I was not athletic. I was a good singer but not at the top of my choir. I felt that I wasn’t pretty. I was not the girl who stood out or had some undeniable, fantastic talent. I was just an all-around, average high-school student. I remember one time sitting on my bed thinking about how everyone else seemed to be so put-together, when I looked up and noticed all the amazing pictures that blanketed my bedroom walls and desk. There were pictures from all the amazing people I have met and places I have gone, pictures of friends and family. The pictures of so many happy events, adventures and smiling happy people gave me a jolt.

Suddenly, I remembered all those conversations with people like Ms. Marge, Ms. Diana Arsenian, and Mr. John Loty (and his partner Ms. Jenny), teachers, friends, family, my parents – even my younger brother Adam. These conversations with people from different ages and places allowed me to begin to pull myself out of the negative spiraling place that I was in at that moment.

It was at that moment that my mom walked into my room. She knew I was having a bad day (she always knows). We talked for a while and she helped me reframe my thoughts. She pointed out that I need to think about what made me special instead of only thinking about what made everybody else special. We started talking about my peak experiences, what I value about myself and those I am with, what are the strengths that give life to who Ally is – she reminded me of all the opportunities that I have had, and she asked me what I want to do (aspirations) and achieve (results).

At that moment of reframing and answering those positive questions, the pieces started to come together. I am special. I am smart. I have an amazing family and a gift for easily getting along with people. We talked about how I am not really with one clique of friends, but how I embrace a diverse group. When my dad joined the conversation, he reminded me that I am a hard-worker – very disciplined, sensitive and kind-hearted. We reminisced about how I had traveled to 24 states and four different countries – not bad for 16 years old. We were now in the heart of creating the positive core – defining who I am, what I am doing, and building a positive momentum to where I want to go. At this point, we were all quite animated, and not only was I thriving but so were my parents!

I realized how, through appreciative intergenerational conversations (having different ages together creates a maximum mix that is magical), a poor self-concept can be reframed in a matter of minutes to a positive conversation where we are all flourishing. I have learned that with the help of others and through appreciative questions we can discover and dream to design a destiny. I am fortunate to be living an appreciative intergenerational life!

In writing my story, I learned a new term, “appreciative intergenerational conversations”. This means that I am learning about what truly defines my life through the relational conversations that I have with others. It opens up possibilities that I could never imagine alone. I also noticed that this is not a one-way street. It is not just me who is getting all the benefits of these intergenerational conversations, it also makes a positive impact on others around me.
IAPG Contacts and AI Practitioner
Subscription Information

International Advisory Practitioners Group IAPG
Members of the International Advisory Practitioners Group working with AIP to bring AI stories to a wider audience:

- Dhruba Acharya, Nepal
- Anastasia Bukashe, South Africa
- Gervase Bushe, Canada
- Sue Derby, Canada
- Sara Inés Gómez, Colombia
- Lena Holmberg, Sweden
- Joep C. de Jong, Netherlands
- Dorothe Liebig, Germany
- John Loty, Australia
- Sue James, Australia
- Maureen McKenna, Canada
- Liz Mellish, Australia
- Dayle Obrien, Australia
- Jan Reed, United Kingdom
- Catriona Rogers, Hong Kong
- Daniel K. Saint, United States
- Marge Schiller, United States
- Jackie Stavros, United States
- Bridget Woods, South Africa
- Jacqueline Wong, Singapore
- Margaret Wright, United Kingdom

AIP Subscriptions
- Individuals
- Small organisations
- Large organisations
  http://www.aipractitioner.com/subscriptions

Issues and Articles
  http://www.aipractitioner.com/issues http://www.aipractitioner.com/articles

Change of subscriber details http://www.aipractitioner.com/customer/account/login

Publication Advertising/Sponsorship
  For the advertising rates, contact Anne Radford.

Purpose of AI Practitioner
  This publication is for people interested in making the world a better place using positive relational approaches to change such as Appreciative Inquiry. The publication is distributed quarterly: February, May, August and November.

AI Practitioner Editor/Publisher
  The editor-in-chief and publisher is Anne Radford. She is based in London and can be reached at editor@aipractitioner.com

  The postal address for the publication is:
  303 Bankside Lofts, 65 Hopton Street,
  Telephone: +44 (0)20 7633 9630
  ISSN 1741 8224

  Shelagh Aitken is the issue editor for AI Practitioner.
  shelagh@editorproofreader.co.uk

Disclaimer: Views and opinions of the writers do not necessarily reflect those of the publisher. Every effort is made to ensure accuracy but all details are subject to alteration. No responsibility can be accepted for any inaccuracies.