Students who engage in cheating during an examination or in disruptive behavior at any time during classes or testing shall be deemed to have forfeited any funds or tuition paid to the Winn School of Real Estate LLC, and shall immediately leave the premises when asked, and not be entitled to any refund, and no longer be students at the Winn School. They also shall not receive credit for any class during which such behavior occurs, nor shall they be entitled to any further instruction. "Cheating" for purposes of this paragraph means using or referring to any aids, sources or materials not provided with the examination papers, or attempting to do so; talking to any other student during an examination; or comparing answers with them. "Disruptive behavior" shall include texting, using a cellphone, talking out of turn, making noise or creating a distraction, being argumentative with the instructor, or otherwise engaging in any conduct that would reasonably be expected to disrupt the concentration or attention of other students or the instructor during classes or testing, whether such persons are actually disrupted or not. The instructor's determination that a student has engaged in cheating or disruptive behavior shall be final and binding, and need not be preceded by any warning.
