Abraham Lincoln. Martin Luther King Jr. John F Kennedy. John Lennon. Each of these individuals' lives ended in murder. Despite each of their short lives, each one's influence has persisted through the decades following his death.

Abel's too-short life lasted only seven Bible verses, yet his voice resonates longer than any other man's ever has. No spoken words from Abel are recorded in scripture, but Abel's plaque in the faith hall of fame attests to a monumental voice.

“By faith Abel offered to God a more acceptable sacrifice than Cain, through which he was commended as righteous, God commending him by accepting his gifts. And through his faith, though he died, he still speaks.” – Hebrews 11:4

How can Abel, a man whose life would seem a footnote in the plan of God, have a legacy so great? What made his gift to God so significant? The answer seems all too simple: his faith.

Godly faith demands point blank obedience. Abel knew that “the first-born of his flock and of their fat portions” was what God would accept, so that's simply what Abel offered (Gen 4:4). No comfort, convenience, preference, or presumption stood to hinder the direct line of fire between Abel's faith and obedience. Cain's offering, though made in earnest, missed the mark entirely because it wasn't what God wanted. His presumption resulted in sin.

Are your offerings simply what God desires, or does something stand in between your faith and your obedience? Do self-consciousness or disinterest hinder your “sacrifice of praise to God” in song (Heb 13:5)? Does your conformity to the world prevent your life from being offered to God (Rom 12:2)?

My hope is that you and I hear the voice of Abel and share in his faithfulness to God. Actions speak louder than words, and a faith of obedience like Abel's can have an everlasting resonance.
