“He who is often reproofed, yet stiffens his neck, will suddenly be broken beyond healing” (Proverbs 29:1).

Reproof is not a favorite part of God’s plan to most of us, whether we are on the giving end or the receiving end. Pride and self-will keep us from wanting to hear it, and anxiety over how the other person will receive it keeps us from offering it to someone who needs it.

God corrects us because he loves us (Heb. 12:5, Rev. 3:19). He knows what is right since what is right is what reflects his very character. He made us upright (Ecc. 7:29) and wants to steer us back in the right direction when we’re headed down the wrong path. He knows where that path leads and doesn’t want us to go there.

When we do wrong we are often reproofed...

- By the conscience God has given us.
- By the commands God has given us.
- By the counsel of good friends God has given us.

If we stiffen our necks, dig in our heels, or harden our hearts after so much warning, we can pass a point of no return before we know it. We run out of time (James 4:13-17) or run out of will to repent. “For it is impossible, in the case of those who have once been enlightened, who have tasted the heavenly gift, and have shared in the Holy Spirit, and have tasted the goodness of the word of God and the powers of the age to come, and then have fallen away, to restore them again to repentance, since they are crucifying once again the Son of God to their own harm and holding him up to contempt” (Heb. 6:4-6). We never thought it would happen, but we are broken beyond healing.

If you are reading this and know that God has been warning you again and again about what you are doing with your life, please listen this time and repent.

If you are reading this and have been trying without success to open someone’s eyes, don’t blame yourself. Some people are just inexcusably stiff-necked. If the love of Christ and the word of his cross will not move them, why should you expect that your words will? Thank you for the humble love that has driven you to reprove another person in the right manner and as persistently as you should.
