The Victoria Gazette

International travel was not required for us to spend time with those famous paintings that adorn the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel in Rome. We found original size reproductions, up close and personal, on the second floor at the Mall of America, only a few minutes' drive from our home in Victoria, Minnesota.

We could reach out and touch the figures, many in their birthday suits, but we didn't. However, we were as close to the artwork as Michelangelo himself would have been, except he had to deal with scaffolding to observe the details of his work and we walked upright in comfort.

The museum quality reproductions were available to us in February through advance online reservations, inexpensive $20 tickets, and $3 audio guides. I can't imagine doing the exhibit without the earbuds, for they clearly and expertly brought the exhibit to life, like knowledgeable teachers in an otherworldly classroom.

Fifteen years ago, we visited the Sistine Chapel in Vatican City, along with many other sights one would expect to find on a tourist's itinerary in Rome. I've got personal photographs of the Pieta and David, both sculpted by Michelangelo, also the Bernini Colonnade and St. Peter's Basilica, the Colosseum, Trevi Fountain, and the Spanish Steps. Much of it is documented in Sue's Album in my online pages of the 2006 trip to Italy, located at VictoriaGazette.com.

But the only images I have of the Sistine Chapel are on posters and in books, since cameras were not allowed inside those historic quarters, wherein cardinals are sequestered and popes are elected.

The prohibition against cameras is not because of the hallowed ground but because of the hallowed frescoes painted by Michelangelo. We were told that the flash of a camera is off limits for several reasons. For one thing, it's a distracting element to other visitors. It's also a killer of pigments, as when colors fade from exposure to sunlight. But leaving my camera sequestered in my purse while visiting the Sistine Chapel was agony.

At the Mall of America exhibit, I was in ecstasy. The show was phenomenal, more than I could have imagined. They suggested it would take about an hour, but it took me and Allan two hours, and I could easily return for an another go-through. It's available to the public through Easter.

In this time of lockdown, quarantine, isolation, and fear mongering, this exhibit offers a life-giving view of the world through the eyes of someone who was obviously very aware of God.

I learned that Michelangelo's ceiling, which he painted in only four years, from 1508 to 1512, contains scenes from the Old Testament, from the Creation of the World to Noah and the Flood. I learned that Michelangelo painted 33 frescos on the famous ceiling and that reproductions of all 33 are on exhibit at the Mall of America, plus his "Last Judgment," which he painted on the back wall of the Sistine Chapel.

I took pictures of many of the exhibits and they appear in my online album. Return to the Gazette's Home Page and Click on Sue's Album.

How many people have rung your front doorbell in the last 12 months? Same here. So when my front doorbell rang recently -- it was on Wednesday, February 10th -- I froze. Not only were we still in the midst of face masks, social distancing, and vaccinations, but also in the midst of a windchill advisory. Temperature was below zero. But the front doorbell rang.

I should add here that we never shovel our front walk in the winter because family and friends use our back walk, which is kept shoveled and cleared. In other words, our front door goes dormant soon after the first snow of the season. The front walk to that front door was now piled with several inches of snow and drift, and you couldn't see where the steps began or ended. But the front doorbell rang.

In the spring, it's a lovely promenade on the paver path to our front door. Hosta beds come alive and window planters wait for impatiens of the orange-crush hue. Light breezes are welcoming. Cardinals flit across the yard. Yellow finches are busy making a nest behind the gutter spout. Squirrels chase each other like brothers playing tag.

It would not be family or friends ringing my front doorbell this time of year. Not even the UPS man goes to my front door in the winter. I'm not dressed to answer my front doorbell. I've come to wear nighttime jammies and daytime jammies and sometimes the two get mixed up. But I am wearing Uggs so I could trudge through the snow if necessary.

I open the front door and there stood two men in the snow, in boots, coats and caps and scarves. They had backed off to more than six feet from the door -- more than a dozen feet, in fact -- but they were not wearing face masks. I could hear myself close to shouting, "What can I do for you?"

One of them replied, "We're wondering if you had hail damage."

Hail damage? I didn't point out they were in the wrong season. Instead I simply replied, "Nope. We've got a new roof and somebody checked it last year and it's just fine."

But they weren't done. The second guy asked, "Do you get deer here?" I glanced at my two big winter reindeer, the pre-lit variety, a few feet behind them and bit my tongue. Instead I simply replied, "Yes, we do. We get a lot of deer here."

I love my reindeer, a gift one year from daughter Jenny. One of them appears to be nibbling on something under the snow. The other one, with an impressive set of antlers, peers into the distance, nose in the air, as if on alert to protect his mate. Neither one has their lights on because they're adjusted to automatically go off after sunrise and back on at sunset.

Another question: "Have you seen any bucks with big antlers?" he asked.

"Yes," I replied. "Our deer come with or without antlers and in all sizes."

He said, "Well, you really should check your yard and the woods because they're shedding their antlers now and you'd probably find some."

Hmmm, I thought to myself. Are antlers valuable? Like tusks of ivory? We have sets of antlers mounted in Allan's man cave. Are they collector items? Do some people go in search of them? Through deep snow in subzero temperatures? But the only thing I said aloud was, "Okay."

Then the first guy said, "I noticed you have a large AC unit up on your roof. Why on your roof?"

The two men, rather youngish, appeared harmless and their voices were not threatening, just friendly, and their faces were hanging out like mine. No face masks, as I said. Besides, Allan was inside only a few feet away from me, sitting in his favorite chair, which should really be replaced after these several years into his retirement. Besides, I've never been asked that question before by anyone at my front door, so I replied, "To cool the upstairs in the summer. We've got a second one on the north side to cool this level. When we built our house 50 years ago, we didn't think we needed air conditioning so we went with hot water heat. We've lost of a lot of trees over the years which lets the sun in so we added central air."

The second guy said, "Well, you've certainly got a beautiful home here, and it's tucked away into all this privacy. Let us know if you ever want us to check for hail damage."

And off they went, trudging down the hill through the snow. I wonder when my front door bell will ring again. It might happen tomorrow. After all, people are hard up for conversation today. How does that song go? "People who need people are the luckiest people in the world."

To the Editor:

Hi, Sue. Several years ago on a bright, sunny, summer day, Loane decided to take his boat and go fishing. I hadn't heard from him for a few hours, so I called and said, "Any fish? Where are you?" After a long pause, he said, "I'm in the ER at 212."

"OMG," said I. "What happened?"

Replied the fisherman, "I got a fishhook deep in my right hand and I couldn't get it out with my left."

I hope that cute, chubby baby on page 14 in the February Gazette doesn't end up in the ER.

Thank you so much for sending us the Gazette in Arizona. It's great to get the Victoria news. We got the paper a couple days ago. Loved the teddy bears! Reminded me of the one Vern gave me 65 years ago! Hope you and your family all are well. Hugs.

Gail Buller

Mesa, Arizona

To the Editor:

To be honest, I almost never can find the fishhook when I remember to look for it, and I've never let you know those few times that I do find it. So I just thought I'd share that I found the fishhook in the February Gazette on page 24 in Alex Lackmann's glasses. Hope you and Al are doing well. All the best.

Paul Kohls

Victoria, Minnesota

To the Editor:

Good morning, Sue. I like reading your paper every month. It is the best paper around this area that we live in. Keep up the great work that you do on the paper. I found the fishhook on page 14 on the right side of the baby's leg.

Dona Ebert

To the Editor:

Greetings, Sue. Having completed reading and reflecting on the article, "Upon Reflection," published in the February Victoria Gazette, I noted the fishhook on the youngster's diaper, page 14. Additionally, this article from John Flora is exceptionally well written and it created many interesting thoughts of the sensitivity, development, and dignity of a pleasant long life.

Stan Hamerski

Chaska, Minnesota

To the Editor:

Hi, Sue. Thank you for all you do to keep our community connected and informed. I found the fishhook on page 24 around the man's glasses, holding the large fish. Thank you for continuing this fun activity and tradition. It makes me enjoy your paper even more.

STAIRWAY TO HEAVEN. Our granddaughter Emily, living in Grand Marais, MN, loves early morning hikes and photographing the beauty of the North Shore. Sunrise yesterday (February 6th), with a temperature of 22 degrees below zero (-22), she captured this Stairway to Heaven -- frozen waves off Lake Superior. Literally, very cool.

What a joy to open up the mailbox and see over 200 pieces of mail addressed to our residents, filled with "love" from our Victoria neighbors. A special thank you to St. Victoria for the Valentine gift bags. Our residents really enjoyed all that was included. This past year has been tough on us all, but even tougher on our residents who, due to the pandemic, have been separated from family and friends longer than we expected. These Valentines definitely brightened our houses and days for our residents. God bless.

MY FAVORITE PICTURES FROM VICTORIA.

We are coming up on the one-year anniversary of lockdown here in Minnesota and, in all honesty, I've enjoyed this year more than many, it seems, largely because of this town and my love for photography.

Oftentimes, going out, skating, and taking pictures helped me get through even the most tedious days at home. So I figured I'd share some of my favorite recent pictures from Victoria, all of them taken with a Canon Rebel XS and a 18-55 mm lens.

Looking back on the past year through the lens of my camera, it wasn't terrible. Feeling alone and disconnected from certain things just drew me closer to others. I feel that behind each picture is a story to tell, and that makes this year full of stories.

I first started going into downtown Victoria when days were dull. However, it has grown into something more, like a place I can always come back to. I took the reflection photo outside of Joel's Original Barbers. The alley photo is between The Noble Lion and Ruby's Roost, which I've grown fond of this year and have visited a lot.

TWO FISHHOOKS. The boys were excited to each find a fishhook today in the February issue of the Gazette -- Luke on page 14 in the baby's leg and Daniel on page 24 in the sunglasses. Were there two fishhooks in February?

There were accidentally two fishhooks hiding in the February issue of the Gazette. One was on page 14 in the little baby's leg, the same location as back in 2009 when I first printed the article about "Reflections." Amazing that I didn't see it myself the second time around, but many of you did! And some of you also found the second fishhook in the February paper, on page 24 on the fisherman's sunglasses, which is the only one I thought there was until I heard from some of you. All were included in the drawing.

When I reached into the minnow bucket, I pulled out Mike Henry who writes from Mincom Systems of Victoria. Mike spied the hook in the fisherman's sunglasses and wins the drawing for $10. Congratulations, Mike! Glad you love the paper.

There's another fishhook hidden in this March issue of the paper. I hope it's the only one you'll find this time. If you wish to be part of the next drawing, email Sue@VictoriaGazette telling of its location or drop a line to P.O. Box 387 and sinker in the mail. Simple dimple!

Display ads in the paper edition of the Victoria Gazette are charged at the rate of $5 per column inch.

A full page ad is four columns (10") wide and 15" high. There is no price reduction for running more than one ad in an issue nor for running an ad on a regular monthly basis because the $5.00 price can't be beat as it is. There are sometimes extra charges for photos ($5 to $10 each when they have to be separately retrieved) and for ad layout and design ($5 to $50). The only color option available is black and white. Camera ready pdf's and high resolution jpg's work great. Average monthly deadline is the 22nd of each month for printing and mailing near the 1st of the month. It's almost always the fourth Monday of the preceding month.

Sample ad sizes:

Economical ad space (5" wide x 3" high): $30
Common ad space (5" wide x 4" high): $40
More Common ad space (5" x 5"): $50
Popular ad space (5" wide x 7.5" high): $75
Half page ad: (5" wide x 15" high) or (10" wide x 7.5" high): $150
Full page ad space (10" wide x 15" high): $300
No inserts. A full page ad is better than an insert. In the opinion of the Gazette, an insert is like a pop-up ad that you like to avoid.

Circulation of the Gazette is 4,900 families — or 20,000 readers.

The paper is mailed directly through the U.S. Post Office. Annual subscription price is $25. Circulation centers on Victoria (3,200 families) and its neighboring communities. Hundreds of subscribers (1,700) also live in Chaska, Chanhassen, Excelsior, Waconia, Carver, Eden Prairie, Shakopee, Minnetonka, Hopkins, Cologne, Eden Prairie, Jordan, St. Bonifacius, Wayzata, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Watertown, Mound, Mayer, Norwood Young America, etc., etc., etc.

Political ads and announcements must be prepaid and polite.

The Gazette avoids advertisements, announcements, and letters that contain distasteful and wrongheaded insinuations or personal attacks. The Gazette avoids half-truths and will not provide a platform to hoodwink or misinform citizens. Short letters on behalf of a candidate are published without charge. Long letters are edited. Number of letters is limited. No letters considered unless the candidate also advertises in the Gazette, prepaid and polite.
