The history of the general store reaches far back in America's past. Nowadays, general stores are far and few between. The New Salem General Store is both unique and special, as it neighbors 4 "lost towns" Dana, Enfield, Greenwich and Prescott, their memory now lying beneath the waters of the Quabbin Reservoir. Towns which held their own general stores, and communities. Where the welcome of a brass bell announced you in, tunes of bygone days played in the background, and the aroma of fresh out-of-the oven baked goods filled the air. The store would have also been a post office, and a place to acquire local cider, farm fresh goods, and odds and ends. Of course, there would be the friendliest and most helpful staff one would hope to expect in a small rural town. It's this kind of nostalgia that the owners, Jeff and Natalie Reynolds want to hold on to throughout the store. Especially in the kitchen, where it has become the best expression of their love for quality, warm hospitality, and really good food. A true Mom and Pop general store and friendly Quabbin market for all.
