Learning Outcomes/Competencies: At the completion of this course, the learner will be able to: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Evaluate poverty and how it affects students brains and their performance in school. InTASC 3 2. Interpret what drives change at a school/district level and also on a student-brain level. InTASC 1,5 3. Recommend effective strategies from those who have succeeded and ways to replicate those best practices in his/her own school. InTASC 1,2,9 4. Engage the resources necessary to make change happen for students coming from poverty. InTASC 9,10
Course Description: In this course, teachers will learn how poverty hurts children, families, and communities and how schools can improve academic achievement and life readiness for students coming from poverty. Author Eric Jensen’s research demonstrates that chronic exposure to poverty can result in negative changes to the brain, but equally how this ability of the brain to change can result in success for economically disadvantaged students when given the right circumstances. Teachers will learn how to create a rich, balanced learning environment and strong teacher-student relationships that have the potential to change the trajectory of students’ lives for the better.
Learning Strategies: Group discussions, professional collaboration, personal reflection, individual assignments (applications, research projects and evaluation essays).
Experiential Learning Opportunities: Students will be reflecting on the assessments and tools that they develop/learn about in class and measuring/estimating the intended impact on student learning in the classroom. Students will learn by doing while completing a variety of activities throughout the course.

Academic Honesty

Academic dishonesty is any form of cheating which results in students giving or receiving unauthorized assistance in an academic exercise or receiving credit for work which is not their own. Any academic dishonesty is grounds for dismissal. Any student judged to be engaged in cheating may receive a failing grade for the course, or any other penalty, which the instructor finds appropriate. Academic dishonesty is a behavioral issue, not an issue of academic performance. As such, it is considered an act of misconduct and is also subject to the University disciplinary process as defined in the Student Code of Conduct.

Acts of Dishonesty Include:

- Cheating—intentionally using or attempting to use unauthorized materials, information, or study aids in any academic exercise. The term academic exercise includes all forms of work submitted for credit or hours.
- Fabrication—intentional and unauthorized falsification or invention of information or citation in an academic exercise.
- Facilitating Academic Dishonesty—intentionally or knowingly helping or attempting to help another to violate a provision of the institutional code of academic integrity.
- Plagiarism—the deliberate adoption or reproduction of ideas, words, or statements of another person as one’s own without acknowledgement.

Unauthorized Collaboration—intentionally sharing information or working together in an academic exercise when the course instructor does not approve such actions.
