
An Introduction to English Sociolinguistics

Graeme Trousdale

Scanned by TapScanner

Contents

List of figures and tables viii
Acknowledgements ix
To readers x

1 What is 'English'? 1
1.1 Overview 1
1.2 Languages and dialects 4
1.3 Linguistic and social criteria for different languages 6
1.4 Good and bad English 8
1.5 The native speaker of English 10
1.6 Standard English 11
1.7 Summary 14
Exercises 14
Further reading 15

2 Communities, networks and individuals 16
2.1 Overview 16
2.2 What is a community? 16
2.3 The English speech community and social networks 17
2.4 Communities of practice 22
2.5 Virtual communities 24
2.6 The individual 25
2.7 Summary 26
Exercises 27
Further reading 27

3 English and language planning 28
3.1 Overview 28
3.2 How to plan a language 29
3.3 Planning English in England 32
3.4 English in Kenya, Sri Lanka and the European Union 35

Scanned by TapScanner

3.5 How has the globalisation of English affected language planning? 41
3.6 Summary 45
Exercise 46
Further reading 46

4 Regional and social variation 49
4.1 Overview 49
4.2 Aims and methods of traditional dialectologists 49
4.3 Aims and methods of variationist sociolinguists 52
4.4 The linguistic variable 53
4.5 A first example of quantitative variation in English 54
4.6 The issue of style 56
4.7 The three waves of variationist sociolinguistics 59
4.8 Synthesising regional and social variation 61
4.9 Summary 63
Exercises 64
Further reading 64

5 Change in English 66
5.1 Overview 66
5.2 What is linguistic change? 66
5.3 An example of variation in the past 68
5.4 The linguistic behaviour of older and younger speakers in a community 70
5.5 Other social factors in change 73
5.6 Beyond the urban west 79
5.7 Summary 81
Exercise 82
Further reading 82

6 English historical sociolinguistics 83
6.1 Overview 83
6.2 Methodology 84
6.3 Variation in Old English 85
6.4 Variation in Middle English 88
6.5 Variation in early Modern English 90
6.6 Variation in late Modern English 93
6.7 The future of English? 95
6.8 Summary 96
Exercise 97
Further reading 97

Scanned by TapScanner

7 Language contact 92
7.1 Overview 92
7.2 Pidgin and creole varieties 92
7.3 Some features and examples of English-lexifier pidgins and creoles 95
7.4 Code-switching 97
7.5 Deanglicisation and conventionalisation 100
7.6 Summary 103
Exercises 104
Further reading 104

8 Dialect contact 105
8.1 Overview 105
8.2 Dialect contact in Britain 105
8.3 Dialect contact beyond Britain 112
8.4 Networks and dialect contact 115
8.5 Summary 116
Exercise 116
Further reading 118

9 Sociolinguistics and linguistic theory 119
9.1 Overview 119
9.2 The relationship between biolinguistics and sociolinguistics 121
9.3 What do speakers know? 121
9.4 The problem of Standard English and dialect syntax 123
9.5 (Socio)linguistic modelling 124
9.6 The modular approach 126
9.7 The usage-based model 127
9.8 What about 'English'? 130
9.9 Summary 131
Exercise 132
Further reading 132

10 Conclusion 134

Appendix 136
References 138
Index 149

Scanned by TapScanner