

THE M. & E. HANDBOOK SERIES

MARKETING

G. B. Giles, B.A., Dip.Ed., M.B.I.M., M.Inst.M.

*Head of the Department of Management Studies
Woolwich Polytechnic*

2171

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOK SOCIETY and
MACDONALD AND EVANS LTD.
LONDON

CONTENTS

	PAGE
General Introduction	v
Author's Preface	vii
PART ONE: WHAT IS MARKETING ABOUT?
CHAP.
I. Marketing defined	3
The increasing importance of marketing	3
The marketing function	5
Marketing theory	6
II. Consumer behaviour	9
Stages in the decision process	9
Major marketing stimuli	11
The influences of personality and environment	13
Industrial buying behaviour	15
III. Marketing research	18
Marketing research and decision-making	18
The scope of marketing research	19
Sources of information	21
Executing marketing research studies	24
Problems of accuracy	31
Motivation research	32
Data analysis	34
Marketing research reports	35
PART TWO: PRODUCT POLICY AND THE MARKETING MIX
IV. Product policy and planning	39
The product mix	39
New product planning	43

CONTENTS

The break-even concept 48
 Products and packaging 51
 Organisation for product planning 54

V. Pricing and demand 57
 Problems of pricing 57
 Basic pricing policies 60
 Discounts 64
 Price change and customer attitudes 66
 Pricing tactics and demand 68

VI. Advertising and promotion: objectives and institutions 72
 The purpose of advertising 72
 Advertising and the marketing mix concept 73
 Advertising and the public interest 76
 Control of advertising 78
 Advertising agencies 81

VII. Advertising and promotion: campaign planning and evaluation 85
 Basic steps in campaign planning 85
 Evaluation and research 87
 Media and costs 89
 Media selection and mathematical models 92
 Advertising budgets 93
 Branding 94
 Packaging 96
 Special sales promotions 98

PART THREE: ORGANISATION FOR MARKETING

VIII. Organisation and control 103
 Evaluation and control 103
 The profit centre concept 105
 The major bases of performance evaluation 106
 Information for marketing evaluation and control 107

CONTENTS

IX. Channels of distribution 118
 Definition and types 118
 Basic channel decisions 119
 Retailing 121
 Non-store establishments 121
 Retail stores 122
 Incorporated businesses 124
 Departmental stores 127
 Co-operative societies 129
 Manufacturer-owned outlets 131
 Discount stores 132
 Wholesaling 133
 Channel-choice problems for the manufacturer 137

X. Sales management 140
 Sales forces: tasks and organisation 140
 Company objectives and sales-force decisions 141
 Sales management tasks 143
 Motivation 147
 Sales forecasting 148

XI. Marketing industrial goods and services 152
 Basic market characteristics 152
 Special features of the marketing mix 156

XII. International marketing 161
 The significance of international trade 161
 The position of the UK 163
 Methods of exporting 169
 Marketing services and government support 181

APPENDICES

I. External sources of marketing information 188
 II. Bibliography 191
 III. Examination technique 194
 IV. Test papers 196

INDEX 201