

POLITICAL TRENDS IN INDIA

By

BALRAJ MADHOK

1959

S. CHAND & CO.
DELHI—JULLUNDUR—LUCKNOW

CONTENTS

Chapter	Page
I—The Historical Perspective	I
Ancient Indian Political thought—place of "Dand Niti"—concept of Dharma Rajya—Advent of Islam—its impact on Indian politics—the period of equilibrium—the advent of the British—Indian reaction—war of independence, 1857—its effects—Indian Councils Act—birth of the Indian National Congress—repression and reaction—Bal-Pal-Lal—birth of the Muslim League—Minto-Morley Reforms—Separate electorates—Lucknow Pact—Montague Chelmsford Reforms—Mahatma Gandhi and his politics—birth of Communist Party—communist socialist alliance—Communal Award—Government of India Act of 1935—Congress exit from office—The Second World War—Cripps Mission—Cabinet Mission—Elections of 1946—Partition and Independence.
II—Politics of Freedom	30
Hindu resurgence—Gandhiji's murder—its exploitation by the Congress—formation of Socialist Party outside the Congress—The Communist Party—its unsuccessful bid for armed revolution—Nehru-Patel factions in Congress—the birth of K.M.P.P.—Dr. S.P. Mookerji's resignation from Nehru Cabinet—Birth of Bhartiya Jana Sangh—Stage set for the first general elections.
III—The First General Elections	48
A bold experiment—Plethora of Parties—their five groups—Election manifestoes—The results—Congress victory—the explanation—the socialist

Chapter	Page
performance—Communist and K.M.P.P. position— Jana Sangh debacle—the other parties—general effects of the elections.	67
IV—The Four Parties

(i)
The Congress party—shift towards socialism—Alliance with Akali Dal—Pt. Nehru's dominance—better placed for election of 1957.

(ii)
Formation of Praja Socialist Party—rosy prospects as the main opposition—Internal crisis—Dr.
Lohia's exit—ideological confusion—Lack of organisational cohesion.

(iii)
The communist party—New respectability—Favourable internal and external situation—vast resources.

(iv) Bhartiya Jana Sangh—speedy recovery followed by set back—Dr. Mookerji's death—Beginning from a scratch—steady growth in spite of handicaps.

V—The Second General Elections 104

Bigger electorate—more peaceful and orderly—Interest centres round four national parties—Congress improves its position at the centre—Set backs
in Orissa, Kerala and other States—P.S.P. position deteriorates—C.P.I. results below expectations—explanation for victory in Kerala—Bhartiya Jana Sangh emerges stronger.

VI—Drift Towards Statism 124

Situation after the elections—Nehru's unchalleng-

Chapter	Page
ed sway over Government and Congress—Rapid strides towards socialism—Nagpur resolutions— State Trading and Co-operative farming—Opposi- tion from within the Congress silenced—Co-opera- tion of P.S.P. and C.P.I. sought—Communist lobby in the Congress—New alignments—Ideological iden- tity between Congress, P.S.P. and C.P.I.—Jana Sangh only party in opposition—trend towards to- talitarianism—suggestions about a new conservative party—Its prospects.	145
VII—Future of Democracy

A pertinent question—factors favourable for democracy—the adverse factors—popular apathy—regionalism and casteism—multiplicity of opposition parties—Communism—Contagious effects of Pakistan's example.

The remedies—Mass education, qualifications for legislators—Strengthening of nationalism, Unitary Government with maximum local autonomy—new conventions to give minority opinion a sense of participation in the formulation of policies.

APPENDICES

Table I—Position of National Parties in Lok Sabha.	154
Table II (A)—Position of National Parties in State Assemblies in 1951-52.	155
Table II (B)—Position of National Parties in States Assemblies in 1957.	156
Table III (A)—Progress of Jana Sangh.	158
Table III (B)—Progress of C.P.I.	159
Index	161