

27244

Public Personnel Administration

Theory and Practice

S.L. Goel ■ Shalini Rajneesh

Foreword by
Smt. Vasundhara Raje

Contents

Foreword	ix
Preface	xi
1. Nature, Scope, Functions and Significance	1
2. Ecology of Public Personnel Administration	41
3. Minister-Secretary Relationship	64
4. Generalist-Specialist Relationship	81
5. Central Personnel Agency	91
6. Classification and Structure	113
7. All India Services	128
8. Central Civil Services	151
9. Central Secretariat Services	166
10. Recruitment and Reservation	178
11. Terms of Employment	222
12. Induction and Briefing	236
13. Career Development Planning	248

14.	Training and Executive Development	262
15.	Successor Planning for Top Personnel	298
16.	Promotion and Incentives	311
17.	Retirement Benefits	338
18.	Government and Staff Relations	346
19.	Staff Welfare	369
20.	Redress of Public Grievances	381
21.	Civil Service Tribunals	398
22.	Conduct and Discipline	409
23.	Professional Standards Administration Ethics	429
24.	Performance Appraisal	462
25.	Corruption and Vigilance	484
26.	Transfer Policy	512
27.	Women in Employment	525
28.	Human Resource Development (HRD)	538
29.	Employees Organisational Communication	557
30.	Motivation	564
31.	Management of Inter-Personal Relations	586
32.	Time Management	602
33.	Management of Employees' Health	619

34.	Inculcating Aesthetic Sense among Employees	639
35.	Management Information System	660
	Appendices	685
	Bibliography	702
	Index	709

Foreword

Sound Public Personnel Administration is the key to success of developmental work since the Law and Order of Developmental Administration. Human development is of paramount importance, creating social, mental and material progress. It is the most essential requirement for successful completion of developmental work. This factor determines the quantity and quality of production as well as output. It is the most essential factor in the job itself. It is the most essential factor in the job itself. It is the most essential factor in the job itself.

The development of public personnel administration is the key to success of developmental work since the Law and Order of Developmental Administration. Human development is of paramount importance, creating social, mental and material progress. It is the most essential requirement for successful completion of developmental work. This factor determines the quantity and quality of production as well as output. It is the most essential factor in the job itself. It is the most essential factor in the job itself.