

STEELE AND ADDISON

SELECTED
ESSAYS

FROM

The Spectator

RAMJI LALL M.A.

RAMA BROTHERS

CONTENTS

	Page
INTRODUCTION
I. Life of Addison	i
II. Addison's Character	vii
III. Addison's Literary Work	ix
IV. The Periodical Essay	x
V. The Character, Influence and Importance of The Spectator	xx
H.V. Routh on The Tatler and The Spectator	xxix
VI. Richard Steele	xxxii
VII. Addison versus Steele	xxxviii
VIII. Addison's Essays	lxi
H.V. Routh on Addison	liv
Macaulay's Observations on Addison	lv
• IX. Addison's Humour, Satire and Irony	lxiii
• X. Addison's Prose Style	lxxix
XI. An Additional Note on the Emergence of the Periodical Essay	lxxxviii

TEXT

I. The Spectator's Account of Himself	1
II. Of The Club	5
III. Sir Roger at Home	11
IV. The Coverley Household	15

	Page
V. Character of Will Wimble	18
VI. Sir Roger's Ancestors	22
VII. On Ghosts and Apparitions	26
-VIII. Sir Roger at Church	29
IX. His Account of his Disappointment in Love	32
X. On the Shame and Fear of Poverty	37
XI. Labour and Exercise	41
XII. A Hunting Scene with Sir Roger	45
XIII. On Witchcraft—Story of Moll White	50
XIV. Sir Roger's Reflections on the Widow	54
XV. Rural Manners	58
-XVI. Fans	61
-XVII. The Scope of Satire	64
-XVIII. Meditations in the Abbey	68
-XIX. The Aim of the Spectator	71
-XX. Female Orators	75
NOTES & EXPLANATIONS	79
IMPORTANT QUESTIONS WITH ANSWERS	156